SOCIALIZATION: From day one till around 6 months, a puppy is in the Critical Period, so called because of the essential need to properly expose the puppy to the world around them during the puppy's impressionable period. Whatever positive or negative experiences the puppy has during this time will shape the pup's temperament and his future. Using classical conditioning (pavlovian conditioning) and positive reinforcement, the trainer will help the puppy make positive associations to experiences and "cushion" the positive around the puppy to help guard against the possibility of negative experiences having a long term effect. The puppy will be exposed to many different environments and have monitored doggy play dates. Attention will be put towards introducing the puppy to a variety of people, dogs, places, sounds, and textures.
